Misty Day, Venice

Date
1897

Medium
Oil on canvas

Description
The son of a navy captain, John Breck studied art in Germany and Paris. Eventually settling in the small French town of Giverny, Breck became close friends with famed French impressionist Claude Monet, who lived, worked, and painted his famous water lilies there. This work shows a scene from Venice, a popular spot for other American painters such as John Singer Sargent and William Stanley Haseltine, whose work is displayed nearby.
